Hajime Kameo received his PhD in 2009 at Tokyo Institute of Technology, where his supervisor was Professor Hiroharu Suzuki. After a post-doctoral stay with Professor Karsten Meyer at Erlangen-Nuremberg University (2009-2010), he became a special appointment Lecturer at Osaka City University (2010-2013). In 2013, he moved to Osaka Prefecture University and was offered a current position of tenure-track assistant professor. His main interest is on the chemistry of transition metal clusters and sigma-acceptor ligands.
